Life is like a circle. From the beginning to the end. We set our goals and strive to reach them. When we do, more goals must be set, more striving done.

Each day of our lives we learn so that we may learn more. Bound within lies the base of our circle—our friends, our memories, the fundamental structure of our future, our very lives.

As we grow we must expand. Broadening the radius of our knowledge. Lengthening the circumference of our curiosity. We must struggle—struggle to break the confinement of our sphere. The memories that encompass our school days, the circles of friends we must some day leave behind. These form the beginning arc—we have only to build... To round out the pieces. That will someday form our lives.

To You Mr. Kendall-Our 1980 Viking

We, the senior class of Frederick High School, dedicate our 1980 Viking to you, Mr. Kendall. It is just a small way of saying thank you for all of the help you've given us. You've directed us through many long hours of practice for the few crucial minutes of contest. You've taught us how many of the earth's creatures live and breath. Creatures that we didn't even know existed. Through you we found that we could have talent and not be an athlete.

Thank you for putting up with the hundreds of sharp and flat notes blown, especially on Monday mornings in band. Thank you for believing our excuses for all of these years to go to the bandroom to practice, when we really studied or talked. Thank you for giving more time than needed on those cool fall mornings trying to get us to march in step and lift those legs high. For all of these things and more, we thank you, but most of all for being a friend.

The 1980 Senior Class

Mr. Roger Kendall keeps the tempo up at the band practices for Memorial Day.

"Your Guests Are Ghosts" was presented on March 21, 1980, as a joint activity by members of the junior and senior classes. The three act comedy was directed by Mrs. Carrie Lashly.

The play revolved around a ghost retirement home and the ghosts' plight of impending eviction from their home. They were aided in their situation by Lin Fletcher and Jim Stoddard, who were college students applying for the same job as manager.

As the story unfolded, we found that Willoughby and Lavender LaRue, two resident ghosts, were called upon to put on a pretense of being heirs to the Peaceful Rest Retirement Home, which was owned by the ghost manager, Lucy Hedgepepper. This was all necessary in order to fool government agents, Mrs. Canuzi and Mr. Darrow and dim-witted Zeke Washington, the ghosts neighbor and prospective buyer of the retirement home, into believing there was an owner for the property.

The plan was a success with the back taxes being paid and the departure of their neighbor and the government agents.

The ghosts, over the years had saved a considerable amount of money, and after paying the taxes, decided to give the remainder of the money to Lin and Jim to further their educations.

As a result of this action, the Exalted Union of Ghosts absolved the ghosts of all their earthly mistakes and allowed them to cease their haunting and join their fellow ghosts in the Greater Beyond!

Staff Rounds Out Year's Activities

The 1980 Viking was produced through many hours of dedication and hard work by the annual staff. The juniors and seniors that composed the staff worked on the annual during office practice and their activity period.

From August 6 to August 9 Laurie Speidel, editor, attended a yearbook workshop in Wahpeton, North Dakota. The entire annual staff attended a yearbook workshop at Presentation College in Aberdeen, South Dakota, on September 25. At these workshops layout techniques, possible themes, and many other relevant topics were discussed.

Laurie Speidel was aided in her task as editor by Kelly McCulloch and Kristi Heis who acted as assistant editors. Mrs. Mary Anne Nelson served as advisor and helped in making various decisions.

Kristi Heis and Marina Onken attended many varied activities as photographers.

There were no other performances until the beginning of the boys' basketball season during which they performed at all the home games. Two routines were presented to the PTO at one of their meetings.

This year the drill team made new uniforms consisting of pleated skirts and sailor tops. Each member received a star to place on the collar of her uniform for each year she had been on the team. Lisa McDowell, the only four year member, was chosen as captain by her teammates. The annual drill team supper was held at the home of Mrs. Marla Walz, instructor, on December 15, 1979.

Each member of the team was required to choreograph a routine either alone or with another member. This, along with no unexcused absences, enabled them to letter.

The end of the basketball season found the drill team very busy. They performed the first and third nights of the district tournament in Aberdeen doing three routines altogether. However, the season was highlighted by their performing at the State "B" Tournament in Sioux Falls.

The Christmas bell sale proved to be the most successful money raising venture the class undertook during the year.

Class Of '80 Enjoys Last Year Together

The seniors of 1980 had many activities to participate in throughout the year. In October they had a chance to participate in Career Night at Aberdeen Central, where they could talk with representatives from the surrounding colleges.

On December 6, 1979, 8 students participated in the American Legion's Government Day in Aberdeen. There the students were taken on a tour of the county jail, saw the municipal court in action, and learned the procedures of the various county offices.

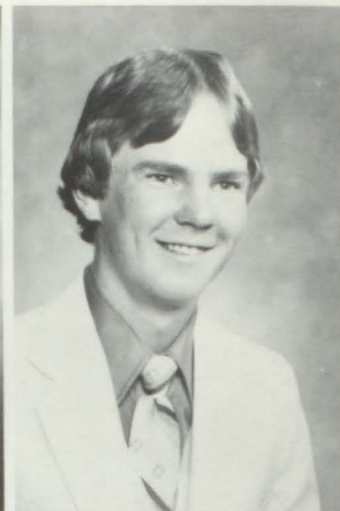

The class viewed the State Legislature in action and toured the Capitol Building on February 6, 1980. They also toured the War Museum and saw the Oahe Dam.

In March, 9 seniors attended the State "B" Boys' Basketball Tournament held in Sioux Falls.

The last activities for the seniors included the Senior Night Out, Senior Tea, the Prom, and Graduation.

Academics Broaden Minds

The 1979-80 FHS curriculum proved very busy for many of the students. A majority of the students carried six or seven subjects while others had only a few and attended the vocational school in Aberdeen. No matter if the work load was heavy or light, the new lockers, purchased from the funds of the PTO Funfest, helped everyone to keep track of their assignments and books.

In all of the math classes, general math, algebra I, geometry, and algebra II, the language of science helped the students to organize their thoughts and plan how to solve the problems before they started. The LRC and NSC Math Contests were attended by the chosen members of the classes.

To gain basic knowledge of the history of our nation and its people was the main goal of the American history students. Their study included the growth of the United States and problems faced by the Americans past and present.

The Driver Education course was divided into two phases; classroom study and "behind the wheel" instruction. Textbooks and films were the main sources of learning. Each student was required to have six hours of practice driving with the instructor.

The basic objective of this year's government class was to describe, analyze, and explain the American system of government. The students' course of study included Government Foundations, the Congress, the Presidency, and the Courts. The class was highlighted by trips to Pierre and Aberdeen.

Mechanical drawing class was designed to furnish the students with a study of the rules and principles that are fundamental to the making and reading of simple blueprints. Application into manufacturing and industry was also practiced.

The course of study in world history class followed the study of those who made history as well as ideas and happenings. The major purpose of the class was to survey world history in order to help the students understand their own times.

The biology students were involved with the basic biology principles—the study of the cell and its importance, a brief survey of a wide variety of plant and animal life, and an introduction to ecology. Various experiments were also included.

Physical education included learning and practicing the knowledge of rules and physical skills. Activities included various sports and a physical fitness tests at the beginning and end of the course. Teamwork and individuality in sports were applied.

-As their first high school English course, freshman English was planned to teach grammar skills, to develop basic writing techniques, and to encourage reading.

The emphasis in sophomore English was on the mastery of the basic grammar and spelling skills. A

At midterm FHS received two new additions to the administration. Teaching chemistry and science is Dr. Blake Hart. Mr. Hart received his A.S. and B.S. degrees at Weber State College, his M.S. degree at Utah State University, and his Ph.D. at the University of Oklahoma. Acting as librarian is Mrs. Catherine Munson. Mrs. Munson attended the University of New Mexico and obtained her B.A. degree from Bethel College. She completed her education degree at NSC.

These students attend Vocational School every day for approximately the equivalent of two periods. The classes help to prepare high school students for their careers and future. Darnell Crawford was chosen as secretary to represent the Aberdeen branch of VICA.

second emphasis was placed on preparing and delivering speeches. Vocabulary enrichment was also incorporated into the English curriculum.

The junior English class studied American literature in correlation with their American history. The English skills were an in-depth study of punctuation and the complex sentence. Vocabulary and composition methods were also practiced.

The grammar skills needed only review in senior English with an accent on punctuation, vocabulary, and composition. During the second semester the main feature was a research paper on which each student chose his own topic of study.

The sociology-psychology class was divided into the study of the behavior of groups and individuals. Sociology class prepared a banquet of nationality foods as a special project. The psychology class took part in an observation of grade school students in Barnard.

The science students studied how the impact of science on their personal, social, and economical life makes a scientifically literate citizenry essential. The class learned of an appreciation and understanding of their lives' relationship with the environment.

Formulas, equations, and mathematical concepts were developed throughout the chemistry course. Chemistry was introduced in a manner that emphasized inductive reasoning as a characteristic of science. Experiments were performed to show the reality of the science methods.

The sole purpose of the general business course was to improve economic citizenship through the study of the business and economic environment in which we live. The four economic aspects of the course were personal management, consumer, social, and occupational or career.

Variety is the name of the game for the students in office practice. Each student was required to begin a set at the beginning of the year but moved on to calculators, stenocords, the ditto machine or the mimeograph machine. Throughout the entire school year the class was dedicated to working on the yearbook.

Shorthand proved to be a challenge for all as the students began by learning the basic strokes. They became more familiar with the technique as combined strokes and brief forms were introduced. The latter part of the year was spent trying to improve speed by means of dictation.

Bookkeeping provided students with the knowledge of basic business practices, beginning with assets, liabilities, and capital. Various business forms were presented and eventually, the students progressed to the more complex journals and 2 simulated business sets.

The study of nutrition, meal planning, meal preparation, consumer buying, crafts, clothing construction, family and child development, and housing were the fields studied by all three levels of the home economics course. Each unit was planned to interest the students now and to aid in similar facets of adult life.

Kent Braa works to develop speed and accuracy on a calculator in office practice while Wendy Jensen studies.
